"OLD LINE CONTEST" AND OTHERS OPEN TO ELIGIBLE DEBATE STUDENTS

Peace Contest To Be Held at the U. of O.

Offers Cash Prizes, Trophies and State Cup to Winners.

DEBATE SEASON NEARS

There will be a series of oratorical contests at the University of Omaha late this winter. These contests will be held to determine the U. of O. representatives at the two and possibly three contests the school is eligible to enter.

One of these, "The Old Line Oratorical Contest", offers a prize of $80.00 to the winner and $40.00 to the one placing second. Last year Winham Bonham placed second in the state contest for the U. of O. This will be held, approximately, the first of March.

The state peace contest will be held at the University of Omaha this year. This state contest awards the winning school large loving cup, with the name of the winning student engraved upon it. Last year this contest, was another trophy to hang from the belt of the U. of O. orator, Winham Bonham, as he took first place.

Professor Guilfoili, debate coach, has announced that the debate team will soon be formed. Debaters from other schools and students who wish to learn debating will be eligible for try-outs for the team. As the University of Omaha was successful in debating last year, having won the state championship, the prospects for the coming season are encouraging.

BAND PARADES THROUGH THE BUSINESS DISTRICT

"What! Another circus," "No, a political parade!" "Wrong again, it's the Salvation Army!" These and other guesses featured the comments made on the sidewalks of Omaha as the enormous truck bearing the University of Omaha band rushed along bearing the blazing signs, "Football today at the University of Omaha."

Through the efforts of the college heads, a huge truck was secured from an Omaha truck concern, and the members of the University band, supplemented by students from North and Technical high schools, and under the leadership of Evelyn McDonald, proceeded to parade through the main streets of Omaha last Friday afternoon.

The U. of O. song, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," "Omaha Will Shine Tonight", and other tunes were played. Owing to the severity of the weather, over-coats were donned by the band members, so the natty new uniforms, consisting of white trousers for the boys and white skirts for the girls, and blue caps and coats for all, were not effectively displayed.

Plans are being made to take the band to the Marysville game. According to Mr. Logan, all new members will be welcomed and incidentally all expenses will be paid.

Pep Assembly Finds Student Spirit High

Pep and enthusiasm were the main features of the Friday morning Assembly. The singing was led by Professor Logan. Dr. V. H. Vartanian presided during the scripture reading and prayer.

Dean Dunlap of the College of Commerce told of the night school Insurance classes, which will begin soon. The course is similar to the courses given by Princeton, Northwestern, and Pennsylvania universities, according to the Dean.

The yell leaders, Paul Fay, Floyd Wilson, Norwood Woerner, and Fred Peirce, appearing in new regalia, led the students and faculty in yells and songs. Coach Hubka then gave a short talk, urging the student body to turn out for the game and support the team.

DR. EMERY ABSENT FROM LIONS' CLUB

Due to the fact that the president of the University, Dr. Emery, was unable to be present at a meeting of the Lions Club last Tuesday, four other faculty members were called upon to fill the vacancy left by his absence.

Miss Irene Goodman, Professor N. J. Logan, Coach Ernest Hubka and Dean A. J. Dunlap were the four. Professor Logan sang, accompanied by Miss Goodman. Afterwards Mr. Dunlap read some of his verse for the delight of the group.

OUR OUR REPORTER

Professor Simmons announced last Wednesday, in the ten-fifty division of Biology, that he was inclined to become angry when he saw the students looking at their watches.

We admit that it may show a lack of interest in the subject matter, but, really, don't you think he should be glad we don't hold them up to our ears to see if they have stopped?

Art Department Plans Future College Work

Utterback Poses as Model of
He-Man for Classes—Shakespeare Glorified

The sketching class had a delightful treat last Tuesday afternoon. In order that they might learn to draw "big he-men," one of the football men, Tommy Utterback, posed for them. But it seems as a model Tommy makes a better football player. In fact, 'tis said that he was so anxious to get on the field that he couldn't sit still, and the students didn't even get a good glimpse of his profile.

Glorifying Shakespeare may seem to be beyond the capabilities of even the most advanced student, but not so. Dorothy Minard has made a cover for her book that is worthy of even that great bard.

Some of the art students are considering making arrangements with the boarding houses of still others to feed them in sufficient quantity so that the still life groups are not threatened. This comes as a result of the disappearance of one such group—an apple, a half apple and an orange.

Before the university knows what it is all about, it may find itself in the midst of a modernistic Bohemia. Signs are pointing that way, for all the students in the Art Department have fallen a prey to the modernistic and futuristic designs.

In spite of this trend, two of the girl designs are going back to ancient Egypt and Persia for the themes of their wall hangings.

Miss Knight has made, for the edification and delight of her students and herself, the most charming of Japanese gardens. Here one finds a tiny pagoda, the arching bridge, flowers galore, and a sparkling pool. All it needs to make it the scene of one of Alfred Noyes' poems on Old Japan is the fairy prince and princess, with perhaps the wicked villain thrown in for good measure.

Not content with their own manufactured work, some of the nature-loving students have invaded the great outdoors and brought in bitter-sweet and other seed pods to beautify an already wonderful place.

U. of O. Feels Loss of Dr. J. F. Schwarz

Faculty Executive Dies Following
Long Illness—Was Great Leader

Dr. Julius F. Schwarz, vice-president and executive secretary of the University of Omaha, died Sunday morning at 4:30 at his home. He had been ill, suffering from a nervous breakdown, since the close of the summer session. Death was directly due to cancer.

He seemed to be improving, being able to participate in a few public activities, when he suddenly became worse more than a week ago. It is some comfort to know that his worse suffering was during a state of unconsciousness.

The University of Omaha and the Presbyterian Church of Nebraska have lost a great leader. It was through his active work that Jacobs' Hall was built in 1909. In 1914, he left the University of Omaha to become Field District Superintendent for Presbyterian Home Missions, at which post he served for two years. At this time, Dr. Daniel E. Jenkins, founder of the U. of O., presented the proposition to Dr. Schwarz to help him at the University. He held the position of vice-president from then until his death.

Dr. Schwarz was born at Pacific, Missouri, on May 30, 1869. He took his theological studies at Dubuque College, Ia. His first charge was for six years at the Presbyterian Church at Connersville, Indiana. In 1907, he came to Omaha, where he was pastor of the German Presbyterian Church, where Dr. A. Kuhn is now pastor.

Funeral services were held from the North Presbyterian Church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Scripture was read by Dr. E. W. Emery, president of the University of Omaha. Dr. Albert Kuhn gave an address and a sermon was delivered by Dr. Calvin Butler. Students of the University attended the services in a body.

TRIBUTE PAID TO DR. SCHWARZ AT ASSEMBLY

A service in memory of Dr. Julius F. Schwarz, former Vice President of the university, was combined with the scheduled program by the vested choir in assembly, Monday, October 29.

Dr. Emery told that Dr. Schwarz, in his last conscious hours, remarked that he was eager to return to his work at the university. "He was your friend and my friend," said Dr. Emery. "In looking over his life, we can find no fault."

Dean James read the Ninetieth Psalm, and Dr. V. H. Vartanian led in prayer. Arrangements for students to attend the funeral of Dr. Schwarz were made.

The U. of O. choir appeared as an organization before the student body for the first time. Its numbers were "Sheep and Lambs" and "The Silent Sea."

Dr. Emery added a word of appreciation for the work of the football team.

AVENGES LAST YEAR'S DEFEAT BY CRUSHING TEACHERS' TEAM

ATHLETIC BOARD
ELECTION ON NOV. 7

At their regular semi-monthly meeting last Thursday morning, the Student Council set Nov. 7 as the date for the election of a student representative for the U. of O. Athletic Board. Persons who wish to file their names as candidates will please turn them in to Dean W. G. James not later than the evening of Oct. 31 tonight.

At the same meeting of the Student Council Richard Dunham, chairman of the Homecoming Day Committee, gave his first report. No definite action had been taken by the committee, but a circular letter, which is to be sent to all organizations of the university, was read to the Council.

A special session of the Student Council will be called on Nov. 1st to decide upon the qualifications of these students who filed as candidates for the Athletic Board.

Mr. Dunlap Presents Historical Poem

Commercial Club Favored With College Poet's Efforts.
Interesting Poem

The principal business of the Commercial Club has been elsewhere, but some things of interest still remain. For instance, Dr. Emery was made one of that illustrious group of honorary members of the club. Other business, in the form of reports of the various committees, occupied but little time.

Then came the second treat of the morning. Since last week the members had been in a fever of anxiety over the outcome of a poem started by Mr. Dunlap the previous meeting.

This poem, an original allegorical epic of Omaha, tells the history of Omaha in a different way. The characters are owls, prairie dogs, and rattlesnakes. Two of the owls, Whit and Who, for whom the poem is named, are the pioneers who come west to Prairie-Dog Town; in other words, Omaha. How they help clean up the town, winning the respect of even the political boss, Gar, a prairie dog, makes a thrilling tale.

Even Dr. Emery, who had been so unfortunate as to miss the first part of the epic, was as interested, if one can judge from his expression, as the rest. The meeting adjourned automatically at eleven o'clock.

COLLEGE PICTURE BRINGS FEW ORDERS

The picture that was taken on Friday, October 19, by Mr. Hallgren of the Arts Photo Company, has been developed. Orders have been taken in the book store for those students who wish to keep a concrete remembrance of the U. of O. in 1928. When the picture first arrived, great was the consternation of those who believed that they had been slighted by the photographer. Mr. Logan has seriously thought of suing him for misrepresentation. First Win In the Nebraska Collegiate Athletic Group

O'Hanlon Shows Skill and Pluck
Throughout the Game.

LARGE CROWD VIEWS FRAY

Playing their first game in the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Association on Friday, the Cardinals stemmed the tide of the "Yellow-jackets" from Wayne, and turned them back on the wave of a 7 to 0 defeat.

Wayne's team seemed to lack the fighting spirit and pep that the Omaha team has possessed in every game this season, and this coupled with poor teamwork and poor headwork, helped to put Omaha up with Kearney Normal, this making the two teams tied for the lead in the conference. Omaha outshone Wayne in every department of the game and it was mostly the over-confidence of the Omaha team that kept them from running up a larger score.

Omaha's lone score came at the start of the second quarter. An exchange of punts forced Wayne to punt deep in its own territory. Ray's boot was blocked and Omaha recovered on Wayne's 19-yard line. This paved the way for the touchdown.

Edwards hit the line for two yards and O'Hanlon followed right on his heels with a gain of three more yards to make it third and five. Edwards, when called upon again, reeled off fifteen more yards to make it first and goal to gain. The Wayne line attempted to strengthen, but there was no holding Omaha then with the (Continued on Page 4)

Classes in Piano to Be Conducted Here

Talented Musician Will Take Classes—Four Pupils
In Each

Mrs. Karl Werndorff will conduct classes in piano sight reading at the University of Omaha School of Music, beginning Wednesday, October 31, at 2:00 o'clock.

These classes, consisting of four pupils each, will take up the study of the best symphonies and sonatas. The work will be given to suit the needs of each class, and all those who have a fair knowledge of music, as well as the more advanced students, may enroll.

Mrs. Werndorff, one of Omaha's most talented musicians, is also interested in the Little Symphony Orchestra, for which she plays the celesta. Her celesta, an instrument similar to the piano, is the only one of the kind in Omaha.

Mr. Logan, Head of the School of Music, is very anxious to have all students who are interested in the work enroll for the classes as soon as possible.

NOTICE!

Progressive debaters of the U. of O.
Turn out to the meeting tonight at eight o'clock. Coach Guilfoili will meet all debaters at the University Library. All students who have ever debated either at the U. of O. or at any other school are urged to come out.
Debates and practice will be there.

A TRIBUTE

The memory of Dr. Julius F. Schwarz will be forever with us. What Dr. Schwarz meant to the University of Omaha can never be forgotten. The foundation he has laid for his successor is truly great.

Kind and genial, easy to approach, sympathetic and courteous, he made friends who feel his loss too deeply for expression. For eleven years he served as Vice President of the U. of O., giving of his talents and all of his strength to the upbuilding of a great city institution of higher learning. His co-operation with the founder of this institution, Dr. Daniel E. Jenkins, is well known, and the friendship of these two first leaders of our university was a noted fact.

When Dr. Schwarz was unable to assume his official duties this September, the students and faculty felt a genuine loss, and now that he will never return to us, nothing we can say will express the true feeling within the hearts of all who knew him. The ideals he held, the life he lived, and his hopes and plans for the University of Omaha—these in themselves are a tribute to the greatness of his character.

To live up to these ideals and to help build upon his plans for our university—would not this be the greatest tribute we might pay to Dr. Schwarz?

THINK THIS OVER

"Well begun is half done", an old proverb states. This is encouraging to students who received good quarterly grades, and it is fair warning to the ones who are low in their grades to "get on those books."

College is a place to secure knowledge as well as experience. The knowledge gained from down right studying during the important four years of a young person's life will be a material aid toward greater success in the world of experience later, and what one learns in college classes under trained and skilled professors can never be received in as great abundance or as well from any other source.

It is only with a keen mind and a highly developed brain that a man can truly succeed. Of course, extra-curricular activities develop one's mind and ability, as does studying. Yet, a correct and steady balance of the two is necessary to a full, well-rounded college career.

With the ghosts of York, "the Army", Taskie, and the Yellow-jackets hovering over them, and with a real, live, fighting Marysville to face on Friday, the 1928 U. of O. Football Eleven will spend a memorable Halloween tonight.

DO YOU BELIEVE IT?

Halloween superstitions have been accepted and rejected in their various forms by the majority of them have come to mean the meaning of a life partner. Apple peelings are tossed over shoulders; one's future mate's face is seen in the mirror; and all the rest of these queer tricks are actually performed on the night of October 31st each year.

It is indeed, that persons will actually believe that the shape of a husband or a wife can be made on such superstitious tricks. Naturally, most people believe it is only a matter of luck, however, and just a "test-up".

Halloween is frequently spoken of as a bad-luck night. We

SPOOKS!

Weird sounds and eerie tones wafted forth from the gym, and our hero dashed forth to spy upon the enemy with his heart in his throat (our hero's throat and heart, not the enemy's). Ding! Ding! Ding! Plinkety plank, plank, car-load of planks, and in fact a whole car-load of planks screamed out into the ether. Then an imaginary fire department with several outfits of bells ringing at once dashed by and finally our hero, panting and sobbing viewed the source of the terrible racket and din. A noisy Scotchman (What's in a name?) by the name of McKannon was tuning the piano in the gymnasium. Needless to say he did an excellent job.

When a guest at Home-Coming day at Peru, last Friday, Gladys Hanson was astonished to see Ellen Niles, Pi Omega Pi and former freshman at the U. of O., industriously scrubbing the library steps of Peru with a tooth-brush as a part of the Freshman initiation. Although enthused with the prospects at Peru State Normal, Miss Niles declared that she wished she were still at the U. of O. She will visit friends in Omaha today and tomorrow.

Although Joe O'Hanlon was forced to take time out in the Wayne game, X-rays which were taken showed no serious injuries. Coach Hubka said that although Joe would probably be out of the Marysville game he would be in shape by time the Dana clash was called.

WHOOS WHOOTS

"What do you think of doughnuts and cider?" was the question confronting some of the most popular students on the campus, the other day. Most of them then jumped from behind, and suddenly asked that all encompassing question, dazedly demanded "Doughnuts and cider?" and looked hurriedly around for an exit.

Merle Mennie, distinguished as holding more offices than any one else on the campus, and president of Theta Phi Delta, made the following complex statement: "Cider used to be used the right way, but now it is used the wrong way, I want bigger and better holes in the doughnuts."

Leah Daubenheyer, petite feminine orator, who holds more offices than any other girl at the U. of O., and president of Pi Omega Pi, said, "The name recalls Halloween, but I don't think much of the combination."

Neil Chapman, the "King of the Campus," and president of the Pan Hellenic Council, in his usual courteous manner, said, "Doughnuts and cider? (Just as every one else had). Why, I like doughnuts and I like cider, but I don't like them together. I like doughnuts and coffee, though."

Laura Combs, stellar student in Economics, and Phi Delta president, declared that "Doughnuts and cider are good, but if there are apple tea, they make it better."

Fred Peirce, sophisticated president of the September since answered, "Plenty good! Especially if the cider is hard."

Miss Ann Slader, vivacious president of the seniors, beamed forth with "Doughnuts and cider always

A True Story!

After reading the latest newspaper story which gave the exploits of that mysterious midnight prowler, Th. Cat, I boldly said that I wished the feline intruder would try to get into my room when I was awake. I declared that I, for one, would not scream with fear when the nerve one attempted to climb into my room by removing the screen. With this last declaration of bravery I retired to my room for the night.

I had been asleep for about two hours when I was awakened as the door to my room softly clicked shut. "A playful breeze," thought I. But then I heard footsteps, soft easy footsteps. The unknown one stumbled over one of my shoes, and I heard a muffled grunt. "THE CAT!" I gasped beneath the covers. My chance at last!

But now that I had fame within my grasp, I wasn't quite so eager to grasp it. I couldn't remember where my shotgun was. My father was far away in the other part of the house. The telephone was out of the question. Summoning up my courage, I resolved to tackle the man-gorilla with my bare hands. With my knees shaking and my heart fluttering, I stole over to the light switch and flashed on the light turning at the same time to tackle my villain. There, with my shoe in his mouth, having gained entrance through the open cellar door, wagging his stubby tail, and blinking his eyes at the sudden light, stood—my puppy.

FIENDISH FUN

King Satan sat on his golden throne.
Surrounded by his court.
The witches, ghosts, and cats were there
Impatient for their sport.
"Their sport," you say, "and what is that?"
You're stupid that I ween—
For the devil and his court cut loose
On the night of Halloween.
They all set out for the human world,
They crawled, and crept, and flew,
And they planned their evening's evil work—
That bold Satanic crew.
The cats meowed, the owls hoo-hooed
The ghosts and witches moaned,
And good folk, lying in their beds,
Covered their heads and moaned.
But e'er they started in their work,
They found that it was done—
Windows were soaped, and gates torn down,
"We're cheated of our fun!"—
The head ghost cries, and off they go
Making their ghastly noise—
But Satan laughed—for he knew well
The work of human boys!

"THE SKY ON HALLOWE'EN"

How bright it was that autumn night. How full of phantom ships the silver sky, edged with the silky grey of waving trees, who tossed their barren boughs and uttered strange, glad cries to cheer the racers on. On every spar white sails were hung, which drank the timid wind, in great, deep draughts, and passed on thirsting still. On every mast a star was hung to blink and beckon mockingly. A goblin stood at every helm, and a witch was the mate of every crew. There was a ghost in every hold, and the stokers, ghouls from ancient graves, of misers who died for gold. On the vessels flew, the sails all groaning back. They weaved and swayed like new dead rising from their shrouds. The very moon, so chill and cold, became dismayed and half afraid, screened herself behind a cloud. They skimmed the sky from north to south, from east to west they clove the blue, and tore great rips in the frightened clouds, till the shining foam leaped up behind in a long, keen blade of light. They raced all night, but none could gain, and none would drop behind, till the bright arrows from the bow of Dawn, who came up hunting over the hills, sank them like drops in a tranquil sea.

THE TYPICAL CO-ED

In this theme the writer will endeavor to present his conception of the average girl student as she is seen on the campus of any college. This theme is not written in an attempt to criticize the modern co-ed, nor is it written by one of the modern cynics who "is off women." It is to be a mere characterization of the modern young lady.

As we stroll along the campus viewing the old historical buildings and the shaded walks of past generations, we must pass several groups of young ladies who, to all outward appearances, are busily discussing some serious matter which demands every ounce of their attention. We notice one of the group because she is a blond, and, as we have always favored blonds, she attracts our explicit attention. Her feet are clad in the latest "pumps." A puff of wind reveals a neatly rolled stocking which, in this age, is a sign of good or bad tastes, depending, of course, upon the amount of rolling which has been done. Her dress is fawn in color and Paris in design. Her cosmetics have been chosen, seemingly, by an expert. The soft rouge has been blended into her fair skin with an accuracy that almost deceives the unwary.

We must give a complete paragraph to her eyes. They are not blue, but brown. They are the type of eyes that make artists sigh, poets cry, and heroes die. They are pools of romance. Because her eyes are turned our way we seek a brother pledge and demand an introduction. We secure a date, after some difficulty, and after the date we gain our usual insight of character.

When with a group of students of her own age, our date seems very wild and daintily puffs a cigarette. She does not blush when someone makes a risqué remark. She is very sophisticated! When we are alone she dismissed the cigarette, and is decidedly proper in her speech. She attempts what is called "a line," but when we fail to "fall for" her remarks she subsides into the innocent young lady that she really is. She is her own true self, the typical co-ed. We thank her for a wonderful time, and leave her in the doorway of her home. We have had a pleasing experience, and feel well repaid for our efforts.

Of course there are exceptions to this example of the girl student. We have in college the "perfect lady." With her we have the opposite type. The illustration that has been given is one of the typical co-ed.

Miss Helen Stitham and Miss Loh Etter spent the weekend in Lincoln as guests of the Alpha Phi sorority home. Miss Helen Marks also attended the Nebraska-Missouri homecoming game.

The Pi Omega Pi pledges had a business party in the cafeteria Wednesday noon of last week. They plan to make eating in the cafeteria one of their habits.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Consider the poor fish; if he had kept his mouth shut, he would never have been caught.

"Do you know," says Emerson, "the secret of the true scholar? In every man there is something wherein I may learn of him; and in that I am his pupil."

Don't get discouraged, for it is often the last key in the bunch that opens the lock.

It is the steady pull of all together that wins.

Don't be afraid of opposition; kites rise against the wind, not with the wind.

Always be afraid to catch thyself idle.

"In solitude, be a multitude to thyself."

The best path thru life is the high road, which initiates us at the right moment into all experiences.

Society rests to some extent upon science, but more upon conscience. Civilization is first and foremost a moral thing. Without honesty, without respect for law, without worship for duty, without the love for one's neighbor, the whole thing falls into decay. No human power can hold up an institution whose foundations are unsound.

It is not what you have nor what you do that counts, but what you are.

A university is no better or worse than the students which make it up. We have a good university don't you think?

Someone has said, "Don't pay too much attention to the person who tells you what you want to hear." How about it Prof?

Lots of people insist that there is no particular difference between the Republican and Democratic parties. There is now anyway. Hoover wears a belt and Smith wears galluses. Now, pick your man and vote.

The big noise that Hoover and Smith are up in the air is true, but only one will make a safe landing in November.

When girls thrilled over the idea of their test at a big to a frat party?

When the classroom doors were locked during chapel hour?

What has happened to all of these things? There is no answer, but just: "Then there are some things!"

Hallowe'en Mythology Harks Back To Time of Druids and Lord of Death

How many, during the festivities accompanying Hallowe'en, ever stop to think to whom we owe this holiday? Not many is a safe surmise, but its history is one of the most interesting connected with any holiday.

All Hallow's Eve, or Hallowe'en, is a queer mixture of classic mythology, Druidic beliefs, and Christian superstitions. Strange as it may seem that the people of this modern, rushing world would stop in the mad rush to celebrate a day that still is more than a little pagan, the fact still remains.

'Y' NOTES

The regular Tuesday morning meeting of the Y. M. C. A. for October 23 opened with a song, "The Fight is On." A prayer was given by Reverend Pattison, and was followed by announcements.

President Butler announced a stag party to be held in the Gym on Hallowe'en Night.

Stanley Schlick urged all persons who had not handed in their membership cards to do so at once.

Guy Nussbaum introduced the speaker of the morning, Professor Kuhn, who immediately launched into a very interesting talk on the qualities of the presidential candidates. First he stated, "Democracy can only succeed if men and women take an active interest in politics. There are three things to consider—the political principles at stake, the personalities of the leaders, and the constituency of the crowd which follows the leaders."

The principles of both parties were outlined by Professor Kuhn, and they seemed evenly matched. The personalities of the leaders are different, however, as he pointed out. The dyes, the pronounced Protestants, the opponents of State Socialism, the rich men who are afraid of the Democratic power, and the Klux Klan he listed on the side of Hoover.

The common people, those who believe in more government control and operation, some idealists who magnify religious toleration, the wets, the Roman Catholics, and the immigrants who hope for easier immigration laws were listed as being in favor of Smith.

The open forum which followed seemed decidedly to favor Hoover.

BUNCO PARTY SUCCESS

Were you at the Bunco Party given by the Y. W. C. A. last Friday evening? Everyone had a delightful time, and Mrs. Stevens learned how to play Bunco, too. She must have had what they call "beginner's luck," for she didn't rate the "booby" prize. Guess who did—Mrs. Emery. Isn't that rare? Margaret Watt from the College of Commerce took high honors, and was awarded a bottle of stick candy.

There were a number of women members of the faculty at the party. Do you know, they even managed to get Dr. Emery in to the party? He was working hard in his office when the girls asked him to go.

Of course, you want to know what the eats were. They were delicious! Grape sponge with whipped cream, cookies, and coffee. Gwen Harger had charge of refreshments.

Stella Adamson decorated the room. There were flowers on tables and window ledges, and a cozy little corner just like a living room.

Tally cards, made by Vivian Kinsel, were all different colors with dice drawn on them.

Much credit is due Dorothy Manger who served as General Chairman for the whole affair.

The ancient Romans held a feast on the first of November in honor of the goddess Pomona, who was the goddess of their harvest. From this the modern Hallowe'en gets some of the customs connected with the fruits of the harvest, i. e., nuts and apples. But it is from the Druids that that most of the Hallowe'en mythology comes. Their festival, held at the end of the month of October, had in it more of the mysteries than any other. Their belief that the Lord of Death rode abroad the eve of this festival, accounts for the superstitions concerning the supernatural, that still reign supreme this one night of the year.

STUDENT TALENT MEETS

Helen Hasselblad, an active member of the program committee, arranged the numbers for the student talent meeting of the Y. W. C. A. held in the conservatory Tuesday, October 23. Elma Gove announced the numbers.

The meeting was opened by singing the first verse of "In the Garden." Mattie Toft, senior in the University of Omaha, led in prayer. Mrs. Tunberg played two lovely piano solos. Her numbers were Prelude in C Minor by Chopin and Country Gardens by Percy Granger. Gladys Mann sang "Roses of Picardy." She was accompanied by Helen Hasselblad.

Evelyn McDonald played a clarinet solo accompanied by Dorothy Manger. Her number was "Out of the Dusk to You." Evelyn, it is rumored, will play an oboe solo at the next student talent meeting.

Was the Kappa party different? Oh, my, and how! They wanted to have something that would be remembered for the rest of the social season, and it surely will be. We can dance to old records, but when it comes to old time pieces that came over on the Ark that is too much altogether. Little girls, you will have to, at least, swing that dance with the Alpha Sigs that was spoken of before. They have some members in the frat who can play, and then, if the Orchestra didn't happen to show up, the party could go on without any tears being shed over it.

GREEK JABS

Paul Quisenberry has at last decided to impart to some of his less fortunate fellowmen the line that has made him more or less popular with the gentler sex.

Ellene Ann Blader, blooming country lass of Ft. Calhoun, appears to be partial to Thetas. Watch your step, Fred. Hugo may appear on the scene any minute.

Our handsome Paul Fay has finally decided that he is old enough to dance. Consequently an innocent little Kappa pledge has condescended to coach him in the light fantastic.

Ruth Serht would walk a mile for a Camel, but when Truesdale offered her a lift to school she forgot all about that vile weed.

The dear old Alpha Sigs are throwing a Hallowe'en party. Wouldn't it be terrible if the older got hard and ruined their frolic?

Can Happy Cathers handle men? Physically, perhaps!!!

The Theta's seem to have an ace in Melchor. But most people agree the "a" in ace is pronounced wrong. His football ability is seriously handicapped by the ease in which he is injured.

It's too bad the editor of this column is so small and delicate. Really, it is discouraging to have to take off your coat each timeirate slammies demand revenge.

Another famous line: "Threadgill, give us a growl!"

Coach Ernie Hubka purchased several pairs of Real Silk Sox from one of his football stars who occasionally poses as a salesman. Could this be the result of the Pi O pledge party, from which, 'tis said, he walked home?

Council Bluffs' co-ed contribution to Omaha University was rather a disappointment last year. But with this year's addition their rating has soared skyward.

Why doesn't Al Aden date the same girl twice? Thetas claim it's Al. But 'tis rumored it is the girls.

Luree Combs, campus cutup, has actually taken a new lease on life. Don Douglas is only a memory; so beware of this versatile blond.
